Biographical Note:

Edith Farquhar Bacon (1892-1988), daughter of Henry B. Farquhar of Ohio and M. Ada Greene Farquhar. She graduated from Westtown in 1910 and Wilmington College in 1913. She m. Francis Rogers Bacon in 1915 with whom she had 4 children. In 1921, she and the children went to Germany for a year where her husband was heading the AFSC Child Feeding Program. After many years spent in Ohio, n the 1950s, Edith & Francis moved to Lansdowne, Pa. where they joined Lansdowne Friends Meeting. Edith became a member of the PYM Race Relations Committee and a member of the board of Friends Shelter for Girls at Cheyney, PA. She volunteered at a rehab center and served as secretary of the Tricounty Women’s Auxiliary. She was a member for over 50 years of the Fellowship of Reconciliation, a group working for "peace, justice and freedom for all humanity." She was also a member of Women’s International League for Peace and Freedom. Edith Bacon loved to sing, and worked with many groups, including, on occasion, a chorus with the Cleveland Orchestra.

In 1971, Edith Bacon moved to The Harned, a Quaker retirement home.

(Note: In general, biographical information is culled from internal evidence. Where additional sources are used, they are noted with each entry. Further information on EFB from obituary notices)

Francis Rogers Bacon (1888-1965), a birthright Quaker and son of Samuel Allen Bacon and Elizabeth Balderston Bacon, graduated from the University of Pennsylvania with degrees in Architecture in 1911 & 1913. He m. Edith Melrose Farquhar in 1915. From 1920-1922, he was a member of the American Friends Service Committee Children's Relief Mission in Germany. From 1923-1929, he served as the first Director of the Cleveland School of Architecture, and from 1929-1953, he was professor of architecture and Dean of the Cleveland School of Architecture at Western Reserve University. Collection Description:

The collection opens with genealogical and biographical information on a number of the members of the Bacon family, the earliest, Samuel Bacon (ca. 1640-1695), rather less on the Farquhar family, and also on the Allen, Balderston, Barnstable, Comfort, Corzine, Cowles, Elfreth, Evans, Fell, French, Horner, Lippincott, Parker, Scattergood, Shoemaker, Stokes, Test and Tyler families.
The correspondence brings further evidence on Quaker family life, education, Meeting, business and friends. There are also references to events of the day, both of historical and cultural interest. Many of the letters of Alfred Lowry and Grace Scattergood (Bacon) Lowry are written from Europe, especially Germany and France, during and after World War I and discuss work for the Y.M.C.A. and Alliance Universelle des Union Chretiennes de Jeunes Gens and assistance to prisoners of war, as well as the viewpoints of Americans living abroad.

The centerpiece of the collection is the correspondence of Edith Farquhar Bacon and Francis Bacon. As letter writers, Edith and Francis Bacon’s letters are centrally important for the picture of 20th century Quaker family life, Edith’s close ties to her parents and sister, Esther Farquhar Kamp, and to her husband and children. In the same way, the letters of Francis Bacon, many fewer in number than those of Edith, depict his relationships with his wife and children. There are also letters written from Germany in 1920-22 while Francis headed the A.F.S.C. child feeding program there (“Kinderhilfsmission”). Edith joined him for the year 1921-22. Some of Francis’ letters give a detailed description of his work there and information on current events. In 1949, on a trip to England, Edith and Francis spent a good deal of time attending Meetings. Edith’s letters continue to speak of their children and their activities, but also her life for the many years after Francis’ death. Francis’ letters reveal a little about his work as Dean at the School of Architecture.

Equally, the large quantity of letters to Edith and Francis Bacon point to the circle of their family, friends and colleagues. Notable correspondents include: Edith Bacon (1892-1988), Francis Bacon (1888-1965), Elizabeth Balderston Bacon (1855-1914), George Bacon (1879-1959?), George Wood Bacon (1780-1857), Margaret Hope Bacon, Samuel Bacon (1848-1908), Esther Farquhar Kamp (1895-1994), Henry Farquhar, Mary Ada Farquhar, Alfred Lowry (1888-1935) and Grace Scattergood (Bacon) Lowry (1891-1964).

In the collection of diaries are those of: Francis Bacon (1813-1870), George Bacon (1780-1857), Francis R. Bacon? (1888-1965) and Sarah Foulke Farquhar Emlen (1787-1849).

There are also some marriage certificates, wills and other papers of the Bacon/Wood families.

Finally, there are graphics, which include photographs of Bacon, Balderston, Farquhar, Green families and others.
