William Dillwyn diary, 1772-1773
MC.975.01.017
Finding aid prepared by Kara Flynn

This finding aid was produced using the Archivists' Toolkit
April 20, 2016
Describing Archives: A Content Standard
Table of Contents

Summary Information ........................................................................................................................................... 3
Biographical note ............................................................................................................................................... 4
Scope and Content note ................................................................................................................................. 4
Administrative Information ............................................................................................................................ 4
Related Materials .......................................................................................................................................... 5
Controlled Access Headings .......................................................................................................................... 5
Collection Inventory ....................................................................................................................................... 7
Summary Information

Repository        Haverford College Quaker & Special Collections

Creator          Dillwyn, George, 1743-1824

Title            William Dillwyn diary

Date [inclusive]  1772-1773

Extent           0.04 Linear feet

Language         English

Preferred Citation

William Dillwyn diary (MC.975.01.017), Quakers & Special Collections, Haverford College, Haverford, PA.
Biographical note

William Dillwyn (1743-1824) was a Quaker born in Philadelphia in 1743 to John and Susanna Painter Dillwyn. On May 19, 1768 at Burlington, N.J. Dillwyn married Sarah Logan Smith, daughter of John Smith of Burlington. Sarah Dillwyn died after giving birth to the couple’s only child, Susanna, in 1769. Susanna (1769-1819) would go on to marry Samuel Emlen (1766-1783).

Dillwyn was educated at the Public School; Philadelphia (later the William Penn Charter School) by Anthony Benezet, a Quaker abolitionist. In 1772, Dillwyn traveled, with letters of recommendation from Benezet, to Carolina to study slavery. In 1773, Dillwyn, Richard Smith, and Daniel Wells wrote Brief considerations on slavery, and the expediency of its abolition: with some hints on the means whereby it may be gradually effected.

Dillwyn moved to England in 1774, and he married Sarah Weston in 1777. The couple had eight children:

- Lewis Weston, 21 August 1778
- John Crook, 18 July 1780
- Judith Nichols, 26 August 1781
- Ann, 11 September 1783
- Lydia, 11 April 1785
- George, 1 February 1787
- Sarah Musgrave 14 March 1790
- Gulielma 16 August 1792

In England, Dillwyn remained involved in the anti-slave trade and anti-slavery movement. Dillwyn was a member of the Meeting for Sufferings Committee on the Slave Trade, and was one of the original members of the London Abolition Committee in 1787.

William Dillwyn died on 28 September, 1824, and was buried at Tottenham, Middlesex.

Scope and Content note

This collection is composed of the single volume, handwritten diary of William Dillwyn, as well as a photo copy and typed transcript. Entries describe Dillwyn's travels from his home in Burlington, N.J. to Charleston, South Carolina, including lists of things to pack, the voyage, and the weather. Later entries describe Dillwyn's time in South Carolina; visits with Friends, business, and Quaker meetings.

The collection also includes a copy of a New York Sun newspaper article, dated July 8, 1933, describing the diary and how it was found by book sellers.

Administrative Information
Subject(s)

- Antislavery movements -- United States
- Quaker abolitionists
- Quakers--History
- Slavery and the church -- Society of Friends
Collection Inventory

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Original 1772-1773</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Photocopy</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Transcript</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>