Abstract

This collection includes letters, biographical accounts of Friends, genealogical material, legal and financial papers, business accounts, minutes, accounts of dreams and visions of Friends, essays, notebooks, epistles of Friends' Meetings, marriage certificates, maps, pictures, deeds, and other material of the Smith and Atwater families.

Background note

Richard Mead Atwater (1844-1922) was raised in Providence R.I. as a Quaker and graduated from Brown University. He intended to study medicine, but instead joined a glass works company. After his marriage to Abby Sophia Greene, they lived in Millville, N.J., summer months were spent at Sea Isle...
City. Atwater devised and patented methods for making accurate graduated measures for the chemical trade as well as a portable finishing furnace for making glassware and other inventions. In 1889 the family moved to Germantown, Pa. and then, in order to study European methods of glass manufacture, to Germany where Atwater's ties to the glass works firm of Whitall, Tatum were severed. In 1892, RMA joined the Semet Solvay Company with which he remained for 8 years. Meanwhile, in 1893, the family rented a house in Syracuse. Then, in 1900, he became Director of European business for Johnson Harvester Company based in Paris. Here they made the acquaintance of the artist Ogden Wood. Atwater remained with the latter company for 6 years and the family then settled in Chadds Ford, Pa. in a home previously occupied by artist Howard Pyle.

In his letters, RMA ponders philosophic questions, discusses the art world, people within their social milieu, business, travel, news of their children. It is evident that the Atwaters belong to the upper echelon of society. The letters of ASA are often written on the verso of his letters.

Of Abby Sophia Greene Atwater (1844-1935), there is less biographical information. She, too, grew up in Providence R.I. Her letters show her to be comfortable within and in control of her world. The family is well-to-do and has servants, child care, travels. Culture is important and ASA attends theaters and concerts, often mentions art and photography. She is clearly well-educated, linguistically capable and picks up German and French with ease. Her correspondence indicates strong mother-daughter and sibling relationships, especially clear in the correspondence with her sister, Eliza Greene Chace. There are references to children's schooling, costs, careers, everyone's health; as her children move out of the family house, there is mention of their careers and interests.

On a number of Eliza Greene Chace's letters are very proficient sketches, primarily of women.

Sarah Anna Chace Greene (d. 1904) is devoted to her children and very attached to her son-in-law, Richard Mead Atwater. The social network of her time depended on visits and conversations and this can be gleaned from her correspondence.

Esther Morton Smith (1797-1865) is, through her writing, clearly also very well-educated. She writes long, tender letters to her brother, Robert Morton.

Information from: Richard Mead Atwater, Abby Sophia Greene Atwater: their ancestors, their lives and their descendants. n.d.

Scope and content
Noteworthy are a holograph manuscript by George Fox, 1673; the papers of George and Sarah (Hill) Dillwyn, 1752-1828; papers pertaining to the Emlen Institution, endowed by Samuel Emlen for educating African Americans and Indians, ca.1837-1848; papers pertaining to the estate of Reuben Haines, 1831-1843; Hill family papers, 1750-1798; letters of Margaret (Hill) Morris and Benjamin Smith, concerning the yellow fever epidemic in Philadelphia, 1793; letters and diary, 1784-1813, of Deborah (Morris) Smith Collins; papers concerning the settlement of John Morton's estate, 1750-1845; papers of Daniel B. Smith, 1770-1870; material on Friends in France, ca.1785-1889, Jean de Marsillac, 1788-1797, Philadelphia Yearly Meeting and Rhode Island Quarterly and Yearly Meetings, 1708-1805; extracts from Minutes of Friends' Meetings around Philadelphia, concerning the Separation of 1827-1828; queries by Alexis de Tocqueville, concerning Negroes in America and Friends' practices in regard to them; material on the subject of marriages between near relations, including a copy of a letter by Thomas Ellwood on the subject, 1706; five items from the late 18th century concerning treaties and other matters between the whites and the Cherokee and Delaware Indians.

Included in boxes 17-29 are the papers of the Atwater, Chace, Greene, Hill, Morris, Morton, Smith and Wanton families. They concentrate on Richard Mead Atwater and Abby Sophia Greene Atwater and their children and on Sarah Anne Greene Smith, a granddaughter. About the Atwater family, Sarah Smith has said: "In the final analysis, I am inclined to believe that the main point of the collection is the way in which this intelligent and rather artistic family fell away from the Quakerism of the father, Richard Mead Atwater."

Other correspondents include: Atwater children, Eliza Greene Chace, Walter Damrosch, William Lloyd Garrison, Sarah Anna Chace Greene, Edward Everett Hale, Rowland G. Hazard, Emmeline Fisher Morris, Margaret Hill Morris, Mary Robinson Morton, Robert Morton, Esther Biddle Rhoads, Esther Morton Smith (1797-1865) and (1866-1942), Benjamin R. Smith, Daniel B. Smith, Deborah Morris Smith, Edward Wanton Smith, Elizabeth Gray Vining, Ralph Vaughan Williams and Ogden Wood.

Topics covered by the collection include: social and political history; business concerns, including Richard M. Atwater's connections with the Solvay Process Co. and Johnson Harvester Co.; the Quakerism of Richard M. Atwater and Esther M. Smith (1797-1865); the composer, Ralph Vaughan Williams; the artist, Ogden Wood; Sarah Anne Greene Smith's views on Japan, 1933-35, while a teacher at Friends Girls School and letters written to her by her Japanese students and colleagues as well as some photographs from Japan.

   A. Commonplace book, 1776.
Note: In this Commonplace book there are several items which I believe were copied from the lost Journal of Elizabeth Graeme. As I remember it, one is about preparing a meal and the other is headed "Settle"—a place in Yorkshire. Edwin Wolfe of the Library Company said these were doubtless copied from the Journal of E.G.

Now about Elizabeth Graeme. She was of a wealthy Philadelphia family who also had a summer place at "Graeme Park" near Horsham. (This is not far from the home of Milcah M.H. Moore in Montgomeryville, Pa. so the 2 women could easily have known each other. E. Graeme was a very romantic person and for a while was affianced to William Templeton Franklin, the illegitimate son of Benjamin Franklin. When he jilted her she was heartbroken. To regain her spirits she went to visit Dr. Fothergill in England. Part of the Journal entries are about the time in England.

I think that it would be a good idea to have a reference to this E. Graeme so-called "Lost" journal.

EDWARD WANTON SMITH PAPERS, ADDITIONS, 1770-1971

BOXES 17-29

Notes

And again: "One idea that has just come to me...is how strange it was that the Atwater family in Paris had not interest in all the modern forms of Art that were developing while they were there. Gertrude Stein was of this same period and how different her appreciation. I suppose it was the conservative influence of Ogden Wood that held the Atwaters captive. Also, they were pretty naive, coming as they did from the narrow confines of Providence & Millville."

Notes

Sarah Anne Greene Smith has made a great number of notes about these papers. These are in the form of précis of letters that are on or accompany the letters themselves, specific notes that are filed with materials to which they pertain, e.g. biographical notes about Richard M. Atwater and his Quakerism are filed with his papers, and more general collection and historical notes as well as locations of other institutions holding Smith family papers that are filed in the first box of these additions (box 17).

While the following description does not include every item, there is description to the folder level and some individual items are highlighted. A + following a description indicates possibility of use for Haverford's Historical Evidence Seminar.

Principals' names are often abbreviated: Abby Sophia Greene Atwater = ASA; Richard Mead Atwater = RMA; Sarah Anna Chace Greene = SAG; Sarah Anne Greene Smith = SAGS.
